"But when the fathers insisted on taking me back to the convent at once there was some denuir. The village lay not much more than eight miles from Karnal, and within hwe of a came of English troops.

"The shrew! this girs saw that by returning me to the English they would be marked as loyal, and probably receive a handsome reward; whereas if it leaked out that they had stopped the flight and sent back an English officer to the vengeance of a fakir, that they would certainly have their village burned by their troublesome neighbors, the English.

"At last, while they weighed the prosend cost, one old fellow got up and made a loud harangue. He wound un his speech, sery little of which I could understand, by saving. Who will know that he has been killed. We are all brothers.

"The old man had carried the village with him. I could see by the interest they had shown in his speech and the angry looks darted at me by more than one who had been, before he commenced to speak, apparently friendly; so when I heard the onlinous werds with which he chosed.
